IN LIFE, Assemblyman José Aragon Angara (right), 39, of the first district of Tayabas, earned deserved fame as an eloquent effective orator in Tagalog. Favorite nephew of President and Mrs. Manuel L. Quezon and son-in-law of ex-Resident Commissioner Isauro Gabaldon, his death 5:42 p.m. Monday Nov. 29, at Manila's Santol Sanatorium came as a shock to his many friends and relatives. He succumbed to an old lung trouble that was aggravated by his recent political campaigns in Tayabas. Born in Quezon's Baler, he was twice elected to the insular legislature, was at one time chairman of the committee on mines. Outstanding personages in the

The President's Album

Favorite page in President Manuel Quezon's family album must be that which traces the growth of his son, Manuel, Jr., "Nonong," now 10 years old. For his two daughters, Maria Aurora and Maria Zenaida, the President may have deep affection; he reserves for his son the peculiar pride which every man has in the heir of his name.

Office of the President of the Philippines

It gives me great happiness to say that my administration, during this year, has gone a long way toward securing social justice for the workingman.

We have increased the minimum wages of government laborers. By this example, we have secured an increase in wages for thousands of employees of private firms. We have abolished the unjust and unfair cedula tax; further reform in our tax system will follow, so that as nearly as possible taxes will be levied according to each individual's ability to pay. A comprehensive plan for public improvements including hydro-electric power, flood control, irrigation, homesteading of government lands, is being developed.

It lies within the province of the Filipino people to build for themselves one of the most beautiful countries and best regulated governments in the world. Nature has endowed us with untold riches in soil, in minerals and climate. We occupy a key position geographically amongst the markets and trade lanes of the world. Our people are industrious, talented, homeloving and peaceful.

I am determined that the Filipino laborer shall not work blindly and without hope and confidence in the future. The day when impoverished people can be satisfied with misery here on earth by the promise of a reward in heaven, is gone forever. All over the world common man is demanding a fuller life. I am determined the Philippines will lead, not lag, in this movement. I am determined that our people themselves shall benefit by the fruit of their labor.

In this happy Christmas season I ask for your patience and cooperation and I pledge myself anew in the service of my people.

CHRISTMAS 1937

Every holy day becomes for many only a holiday. A holiday is in itself a good day, needing no defense. But pity it is that a day made sacred by memory should be lost in the uproar and tumult of pleasure seeking alone.

Gifts and feasting and gaiety and laughter cannot make Christmas, though they belong.

Christmas is a spirit.

Christmas is the absence of discord.

Christmas is at least an interlude of happiness which we long to have and to hold the world around forever and ever.

The Church has done its best when it has united the spirit of the holy day with the spirit of the holiday. The Church at its best brings children to the Wonder Child born at Bethlehem. There they may adore with the shepherds. They may bring gifts to one another and to the poor, which are gifts to the Lord. They may chant with the angels. There they shall have no fear. They may sing and shout with laughter, sure that He will love their songs and laughter as He loves their prayers.

How He would love it if all men and women the world over, who are children, His children, could this Christmas Day 1937 shout with laughter and sing "Peace on earth; good will to men" — and mean it.

FOTO HEADLINES IN P. I.: PRESIDENT QUEZON LEAVES BED AFTER APPENDECTOMY 12-1-37

DISTURBED was the nation in the early morning hours of Nov. 23 when it learned of the sudden illness of President Quezon. At 10 o'clock that morning the President was operated on for acute appendicitis at Philippine General hospital, with Dr. Antonio C. Sison, head physician, Dr. Antonio Vasquez and Dr. Juanario Estrada, operating surgeons, attending. When at exactly 10:15 the appendix was removed by Dr. Vasquez it was found to have swollen up much and an hour delay in the operation would have been fatal. Time and again after the operation the President's fever would rise up and worry his doctors, occasion a "no visitors" injunction from attendants. Fortnight later the patient was permitted to use the wheelchair (above) and move around the hospital. By Dec. 9 the President had gotten so well that his doctors even allowed him to sit up and sign important state documents (below). The polka-dotted scarf in the foto belongs to Quezon Aide Major Manuel Nieto.

El Presidente Quezon se detiene disgustado ante uno de los puestos de objetos baratos que aparecen a la derecha, durante su visita al Mercado de Paco esta mañana. El Director Hermandad, de la Sanidad, a su lado, reitera su queja publicada ayer tarde por "La Vanguardia" contra estos puestos que no tienen relación alguna con el verdadero objetivo de un mercado público de artículos como estos.

"LA SALUD ES MAS IMPORTANTE QUE CUALQUIER INGRESO..."

POR RAFAEL S. RIPOLL
Redactor de La Vanguardia

"Cómo, Sr. Presidente, ¿qué no son frescos mis pescados?" parece indagar el rostro grave de la tendera de la derecha, mientras el Jefe Ejecutivo, ante el puesto de los pescados, tiene una expresión de gusto en la boca.

HUNDIENDO sus flamantes botas militares en una pulgada de agua pestilente del puesto de los pescadores y percibiendo sin pestañear el vaho de los mostradores carniceros y el melífero aroma de las frutas en sazón—el precio para una observación directa de las necesidades del pueblo—el Presidente Manuel L. Quezon realizó el jueves por la mañana una meticolosa inspección de los mercados de la Quinta y Paco, "donde los reglamentos sanitarios no se cumplen estrictamente". Le acompañaron el Comandante Hunter, de la Misión Militar; el Alcalde Posadas, el Director de Sanidad Hernando y el Comandante Nieto.

Entre una doble hilera de mostrados

Arriba: Esta mujer jamás pudo imaginarse que a sus espaldas el Presidente de Filipinas se había detenido para observar cómo ella escarbaba ansiosamente en un montón de tripas de vaca en un puesto de carne del Mercado de la Quinta.

A la derecha: "La salud del público es más importante que los ingresos del gobierno", exclama el Presidente Quezon mientras el Alcalde Posadas y el Director Hernando le escuchan atentamente.

El Presidente, ante un puesto de frutas del Mercado de Paco. "Vamos a remediar esto" parece decir su rostro meditativo. A su lado aparece el Director Eugenio Hernando, de la Sanidad.

res abiertos sobre los que se amontonaban las carnes el Presidente abrió paso con dificultad por el gentío que acababa de darse cuenta de que el Presidente de Filipinas estaba en el mercado de la Quinta y que acendia a "robarle una hojeda". Una mujer del pueblo escarbaba en un montículo de tripas de vaca. Jamás pudo haberse imaginado que el Presidente se había detenido unos segundos a su lado, sonriendo ante el afanoso bregar de la mujer por conseguir algo mejor por sus exiguas monedas de cobre.

Siguió solo, separándose unos pasos de sus acompañantes, hasta el puesto de los pescadores, con su piso hundido en una pulgada de agua sucia, pantanosa y su fuerte olor a marisco. Junto al puesto de una vieja mercedera, donde vió una profusión de grandes pescados, se detuvo para conversar con la pobre mujer. "¿De dónde son estos pescados? ¿Son frescos?"... La mujer escondió su timidez para decir "si señor" con una voz imperceptible.

Con el ceño fruncido recorrió las filas de "carinderías" y de puestos de objetos baratos, paradójicos dentro de un mercado público de comestibles.

"¿Por qué se autoriza esto aquí?" exclamó frente a un puesto de baratijas. "¿Ingresos? La salud del público es más importante que cualquier ingreso que pueda obtener el gobierno" replicó compendiando en una oración todo cuanto pudo haber dicho en un largo mensaje a la Asamblea Nacional.

Más allá, vió cómo una tienda idéntica a cualquiera tienda "de esquina" desplazaba del sitio a muchos vendedores de legumbres o de carne. "Estas son tiendas 'regulares'. ¿Por qué se permite que estén aquí?", preguntó

Quezon ve defectos en el sombrero militar

El Presidente Manuel L. Quezon fotografiado esta mañana mientras inspeccionaba a los oficiales de la guardia de honor del Palacio de Malacañang y durante el cual el Primer Magistrado de la Nación tuvo una impresión poco favorable del sombrero que usa el ejército filipino. Informado de ciertos defectos del sombrero que está hecho del "guinit" de coco, el Presidente Quezon para cercionarse de la verdad decidió hacer una inspección y según informes, el Presidente halló confirmados los defectos. Se ha sabido que el sombrero aunque es barato pues cuesta P1.50, con todo es poco resistente necesitándose cambiarlo todos los años si no se rompe antes de llegar un año como sucede con frecuencia. Aunque hay ya seguridad sobre el cambio, sin embargo, no se sabe aún con qué clase de sombrero será sustituido el actual. La Vanguardia 2-28-38

SLOW BUT SURE

WHEN the affairs of state weigh heavily upon the President's shoulders, a bit of relief comes in the form of a hunt in Tayabas—in the barrio of Matataha, Mulanay, to be exact. President Quezon is here shown trying an altogether new style of hunting, mounted on a saddled carabao . . . Slow, you say? Well, he got a lot of fun while he was at it, and that was what he was after.

LINE TO THE SOUTH

The official linking with appropriate ceremonies of the Bicol line with the main trunk of the Manila Railroad Company at the town of Del Gallego, Camarines Sur, marks the beginning of a new era in Philippine railroad transportation. Across a formidable gap hitherto negotiated by means of an overwater trip of several hours, the rails have been strung to enable the traveler to make the long Manila-to-Legaspi trip in the space of 12 hours.

The achievement is a credit to the efficient management of the Manila Railroad Company. Through many lean years, during which it has been the object of severe criticism, it emerges today out of the red, not only in the matter of finances, but in that of demonstrated initiative and enterprise.

The completion of the Manila-to-Legaspi line and the discontinuance of unimportant lines shows that the company is figuring on the long pulls to carry its indispensable service to the people.

MANILA-LEGASPI LINE INAUGURATION Souvenir

McNUTT AND QUEZON IN BICOLANDIA—Against a background of luxuriant palms and stone-markers of progress, U. S. High Commissioner McNutt and President Quezon were caught by the DMHM photographer last Sunday when they inaugurated the Manila-Legaspi line of the Manila Railroad at Del Gallego, Camarines Sur. The stone marker in the background records the gratitude of the region to President Quezon whose early dream it was to open to railroad traffic the rich country of the Bicol provinces. Recognizable in the foreground, besides the High Commissioner and the President, are Speaker Gil Montilla, Floor Leader Ozamiz, Assemblymen Dizon, Luna, and Cabili, Major Hutter, detailed as aide to the President, H. "Andy" Anderson of the Manila Hotel, Manager Balmaceda of the national produce exchange, and Governor Miguel Lukban of Camarines Sur.

THIRTY-FOUR "MUST" BILLS went through the legislative mill during the two-day special session ending midnight Tuesday. One of the bills passed met with opposition from Assemblyman Camillo Osias, La Union, shown defending General Aguinaldo's pension...
IN THE COURSE of the discussions, Osias hurled charges against the Administration in connection with the removal of Judge Zandueta... In a caucus of majority party, assemblymen at the Speaker's office a day after (note President entering caucus room, right), the point was brought up that nobody defended the President's policy from the Osias attack... This consideration caused the assemblymen to pass a vote of confidence in the President and to raise the question of ousting Osias from the party...

Francis Bowes Sayre: next U. S. High Commissioner to the Philippines?

HIS intimate acquaintance with Philippine affairs made primarily through the part he played as head of the interdepartmental committee and honorary chairman of the Joint Preparatory Committee on Philippine Affairs (JPCPA) makes Assistant Secretary of State Francis Bowes Sayre, 63, left, most probable choice as successor to High Commissioner Paul Vories McNutt when the latter resigns next October, highly authoritative Washington political experts believe. Some commentators however discount the choice because Sayre is reported unsympathetic with President Roosevelt's policy toward the Philippines, has some ambitions for a higher post in the federal government. Son-in-law of the late President Thomas Woodrow Wilson, Sayre was professor of law at Harvard (1929-1934), adviser in foreign affairs to the Siamese government (1923-1925), was appointed to his present Washington post in 1933. He is shown with President Quezon chatting during a meeting of the JPCPA in Washington, April 19, 1937.

Cebu inaugurates a magnificent provincial capitol, hears Quezon praise its great leaders

GOVERNOR RODRIGUEZ

ADMITTEDLY one of today's most magnificent public edifices in the Philippines is Cebu's provincial capitol. The building, which took two years to build, was June 14 inaugurated, with President Quezon as guest of honor.

Some 20,000 Cebuanos and visitors from nearby provinces witnessed the impressive ceremony with which the building was inaugurated, heard the President deliver an impassioned, stirring, spicy speech. Thrilled were most Cebuanos to hear him demonstrate an amazing knowledge of the building's history by tracing its origin and how it came into being. Pleased was Cebu's Man of the Hour, Sergio Osmeña, when the President referred to him as the one who first conceived of erecting a provincial capitol worthy of his province and people. The guest of honor also included in his humorous sallies the incumbent provincial governor, Buenaventura Rodriguez, referring to him as the most "unfortunate" man during the occasion—unfortunate, because he (the President) had considered dismissing the provincial governor and appointing himself to take his place for daring to have an office bigger than that of the President of the Commonwealth's.

The lengthy speech was delivered in English, was translated into the Cebuano dialect by Justice Manuel Briones, of the Court of Appeals.

The capitol cost the province of Cebu about half a million pesos, raised by sale of bonds which was approved May, 1936 by President Quezon. The plans were prepared by government Architect Juan Arellano who completed the same fully one year prior to the laying of cornerstone on June 27, 1936, by the Chief Executive. Builders were Pedro Siochi and Co., well-known Manila building contractors. The land on which the capitol stands once belonged to the Osmeñas, was sold to Cebu Heights Co., owned by the Bank of the P. I., Vicente Madrigal and José Araneta, and later donated to the province.

Sponsors for the inauguration were the wives of the President and Vice-President of the Philippines, both of whom were absent. Mrs. Mariano Jesus Cuenca, Mrs. Sotero Cabahug, Mrs. Buenaventura Rodriguez, Mrs. Andrea H. Roa, and Mrs. Juan O. Climaco. One year in the Philippines has given Commissioner McNutt a rich background that he must have drawn from when in his last visit to the United States he made a memorable speech that attracted nationwide interest. How long he expects to remain in his post here is the subject of conjecture but Americans and Filipinos alike hope it may be as long as possible. A man of his calibre is needed to steer Philippine-American relations to a safe haven.

DE LA SALLE COLLEGE (ABOVE), ARISTOCRATIC SECTARIAN INSTITUTION IN MANILA, WAS FOUNDED IN 1911.

Nonong Quezon goes to school at De La Salle college

TRAVEL is generally accepted as an effective means of educating one's self. It broadens one's education. A part of the education of twelve-year-old Nonong, only son of President Manuel L. Quezon, has been obtained through travel. In a few of his extensive trips abroad, the President took along his child, consequently interrupted the boy's studies in school. Nonong's travels and great opportunities for contact in foreign countries, however, made up for what academic training he lost in school. He is a smart pupil, can carry on a good conversation and dabble freely on travel topics.

This year, Nonong is back at the intermediate department of St. John Baptist de La Salle college, a sixth-grader under the tutelage of kind sagacious Christian Brothers. His father went to school in the Colegio de San Juan de Letran. Every schoolday, at about 7:45 o'clock a.m., Nonong's mother, the First Lady of the Land, combs the child's hair for a finishing touch, checks on the handkerchiefs in his pockets, and after saying the fond "bye-bye" amenities the boy gets into a big No. 1 limousine that whisks him out of Malacañan Palace grounds to the college. Nonong comes home at 12 noon, and goes out to school again at 1:30 p.m. More often than not he is the only passenger in the big car.

Enjoying the same privileges and subjected to the same strict school regulations like any other pupil, the President's son is by no means a favored boy in the classroom. He likes mathematics and loves to juggle figures, but his report card shows he is better in grammar and catechism. He has a small, firm voice that shows potentialities for good oratory when developed and mature. Regarded as a "reg'lar fellow" by his schoolmates, Nonong is a typical boy on the campus. He wears short pants, is fond of short-sleeved, open shirt. He carries his books and pencils in a bag, kicks the football during recess. Nonong has many dreams of the future, but he can't tell which one he cherishes most.

GRABBING his constant school-companion, a cloth-pouch of books, note-books, Nonong jumps out of the car, rushes to class.

THERE must be something in the book which gives our La Sallite the look of repugnance. Nonong loves funnies.

RECITING before the class, the President's son unconsciously reaches out for the end of his pants with the left hand.

HE IS HAVING his "ordeal" at the blackboard analyzing a sentence, as his shirt clumsily comes out of his pants in the back.

ATHLETICS is part of the school training, and Nonong, a prospective full-back, listens attentively to a Brother's pointers.

MANUEL QUEZON JR. looks every inch like his illustrious father when he beams or scowls. Brother Lucian (above) is showing him a page in a text-book to which Nonong reacts with knitted brows and a sour face. The good Brother sees what he can do about it.

THE PRESIDENT RETURNS FROM JAPAN—and while the guns boomed the presidential salute and the crowds roared their welcome and Philippine army soldiers stood at attention, President Quezon paused to receive his wife's tender welcome as he stepped on the President's landing, while the two Quezon girls, Aurora Maria and Zenaida, waited for their turn to greet their distinguished father. Major General Basilio J. Valdes as Mrs. Quezon's escort is seen behind.

"I challenge..."

The President interpreted their presence as support for the separation of Church and State.

Lower picture: A sensational portion of the President's speech, which was heartily applauded by the public, when he said he will brook no interference by any religious head in the affairs of the government.

The Malacañan guards are shown above as they saluted the chief executive. Upper center picture is a snapshot of the President as he stressed a point in his speech on the Luneta. Lower left picture, the President in Malacañan with Secretary Vargas and his two daughters.

SHOW WAS THE TRIP, DAD—Miss Maria Aurora greets her distinguished father at the Landing, escorts him to the raised platform for his impromptu speech, delivered in Tagalog.

WILL NOT TOLERATE MEDDLING—The President in his radiocast speech, reiterated his stand on the religious instruction issue, saying that when he vetoed the religious measure just before he left for Japan and China, he did it in order to prevent any meddling in the affairs of the government.

40,000 ROARED WELCOME to the President yesterday morning when he disembarked from a launch at the Presidential Landing. Labor elements predominated in the immense crowd. "Mabuhay" repeatedly shouted the workers who have many reasons to be grateful to the President.

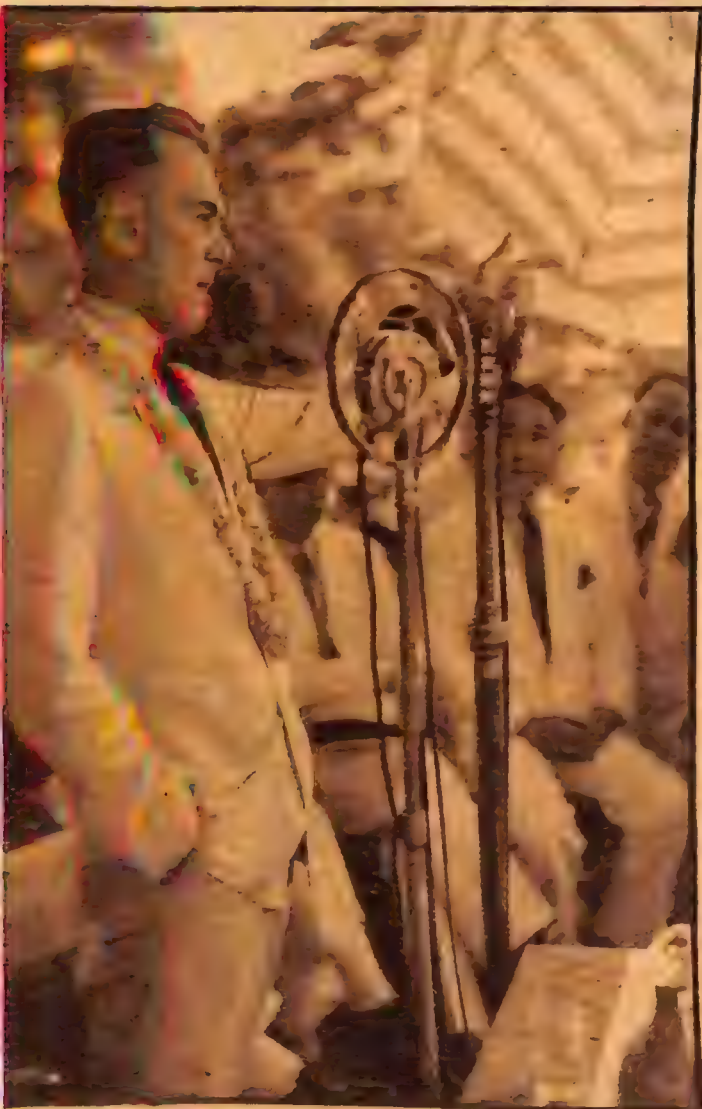

Smarthly dressed, the President inspects the Malacañang palace guards, looking like ROTC cadets in their new helmets.

"THIS POPULAR demonstration," the President declared in a short speech, "can only have one meaning...that you have come here to assure me that both my veto on the bill regarding religious instruction and my stand on the question of the separation of Church and State have met with your approval..."

"...I CANNOT REFUSE, and the government cannot refuse, the exercise of free speech to prelates...Free speech is a Constitutional right...But in the pastoral letter, they (archbishop and bishops of Cebu) were expressing their collective opinions... I am ready for a showdown..."

"...AND, if I am right in my interpretation of the significance of this demonstration, you make me very happy..." And the President went straight to Malacañan to begin serious, hard work... He has convoked the National Assembly to a special session tomorrow.

THE PRESIDENT ARRIVES...

President Manuel L. Quezon of the Philippines holding a copy of his message, snapped arriving with Vice-President Osmeña a little distance behind. This message is destined to become one of the historic state documents of the Philippines. It was universally praised as a statesmanlike message for its vision as well as its courage in dealing frankly with very delicate national problems.

ATTENTION!—All eyes are on the President as he enters the session hall. Looking on are Assemblymen Perez, Kapunan, Magalona, Corpuz, Hernaez, and Guillermo Z. Villanueva. The big crowd in the gallery which came to hear the President's message was one of the largest ever seen in the National Assembly.

Como un simbolo de la inmortalidad de Rizal y de las luchas que arrostrara triunfalmente, ya que si murió, solo fué para vivir eternamente en la posteridad, se yergue esta humilde estatua del héroe, erigida en el cuartel de policía del pueblo de San Pablo, Laguna. El incendio como una ola gigantesca, anegó casi todo el pueblo, reduciendo a pavesas muchos edificios, entre ellos el cuartel policiaesca. MANILA

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES
PROCLAMATION No. 302

DECLARING SATURDAY, AUGUST 13, 1938, AS A SPECIAL NATIONAL HOLIDAY

WHEREAS, the thirteenth day of August, nineteen hundred and thirty-eight, will be the fortieth anniversary of the occupation of Manila by American forces;

WHEREAS, that day inaugurated in the world a new conception in the relationship between a sovereign country and a dependency;

WHEREAS, during the space of forty years the relationship then conceived has been so nurtured that there has been developed in our beloved country a state which is now in its final stages of preparation to take its place among the sovereign nations of the world; and

WHEREAS, it is deemed just and fitting that the Filipino people render honor to the great democracy of the United States of America for the unparalleled progress and development that have been the fruits of her policy;

I, THEREFORE, I, MANUEL L. QUEZON, President of the Philippines, do hereby proclaim the thirteenth day of August, nineteen hundred and thirty-eight, to be a special national holiday, the observance of which shall be a symbol of our esteem and gratitude.

To that end, a committee is hereby formed composed of the Secretary of the Interior, as Chairman, and the Chief of Staff of the Philippine Army and the Mayor of the City of Manila, as members, whose duty it shall be to make the necessary arrangements for an appropriate celebration of this memorable day, and I call upon all national, provincial and municipal officials and all public spirited citizens and institutions of the Philippines to actively assist the committee herein created for the purpose.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the Commonwealth of the Philippines to be affixed.

Done at the City of Manila, this 6th day of August, in the year of Our Lord, nineteen hundred and thirty-eight, and of the Commonwealth of the Philippines, the third.

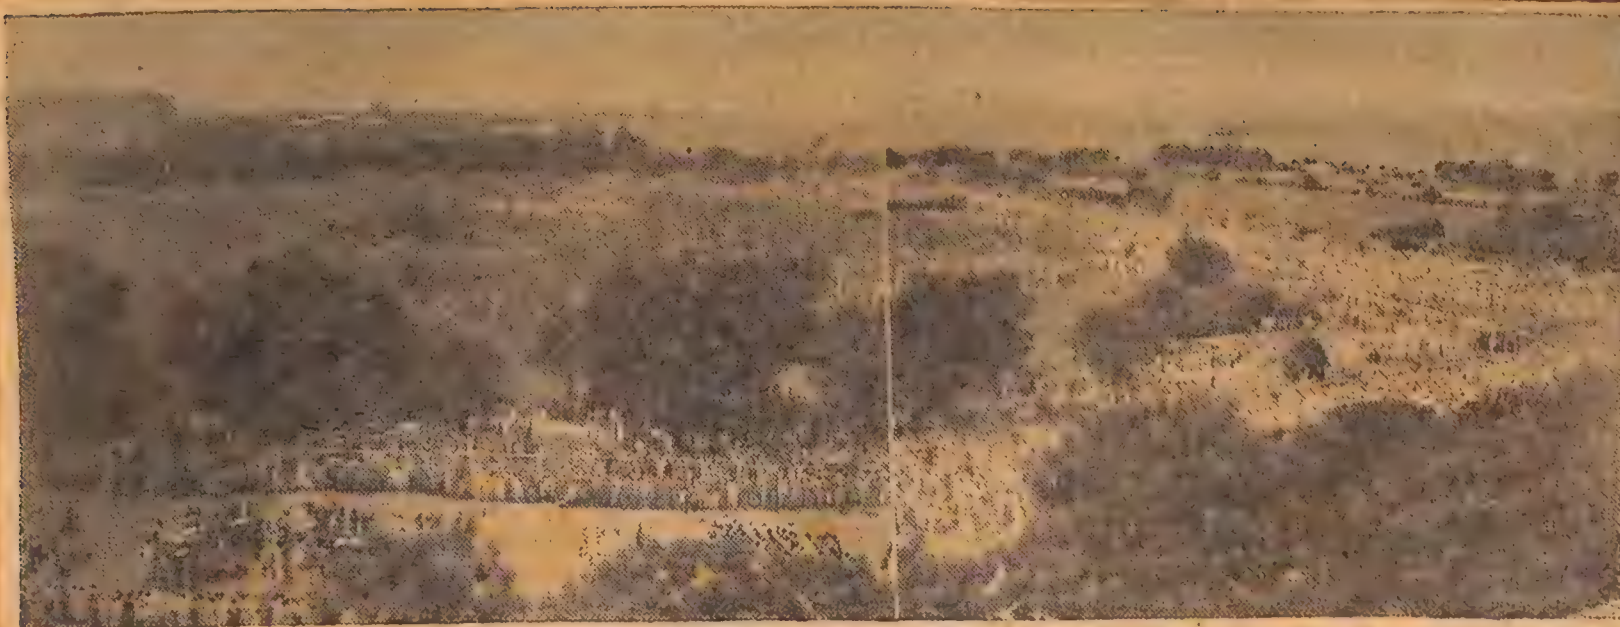

Manuel L. Quezon

By the President:

George B. Vargas
Secretary to the President

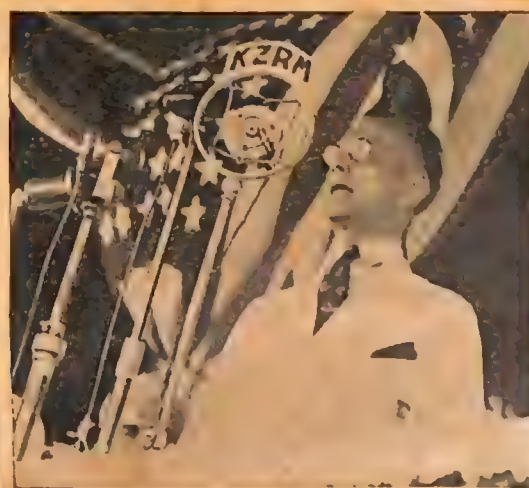

HIGHLIGHT of President Quezon's Occupation Day speech last Saturday was the presentation of the American and Filipino flags to the President of the United States through High Commissioner Paul V. McNutt. Here Commissioner McNutt is listening intently as the President speaks into the microphone after the parade had passed the reviewing stand. Others in the photo are Vice-President Sergio Osmeña, Speaker Gil Montilla, General Douglas MacArthur, Mrs. McNutt and Mrs. Quezon.

FILIPINO GRATITUDE ON PARADE

AMONG the earliest arrivals at the starting grounds of the mammoth Occupation Day Parade last August 13, was the President himself, escorted by a unit of the Philippine cavalry. The legislative building is in the background.

UPON arrival near President Landing, President Quezon, above, alighted from his car and secured an escort of honor. Major Manuel Nieto, his aide-de-camp, is shown with him. At the left, President Quezon leads the 150,000 in the parade. He is all smiles, chest out and in brisk, military stride. Immediately following him are Vice-President Sergio Osmeña and members of the cabinet.

Speaker Gil Montilla led the members of the National Assembly in the gratitude parade last Saturday. This view was taken as the group passed the reviewing stand. The time was about nine o'clock in the morning, and despite the sweltering temperature the solons, judging from their faces, felt pleasant. Note different types of gait and stride of the lawmakers.

PHILIPPINE ARMY TRAINEES forming one of the biggest units in the Gratitude Parade on Occupation Day on August 13, last. One of the biggest crowds ever turned out in Manila flocked along the route of the parade to witness the affair.

ARMY TRAINEES from Camp Murphy are shown above led by their officers as they passed the reviewing stand. The trainees were in the regulation short pants and gunit hats.

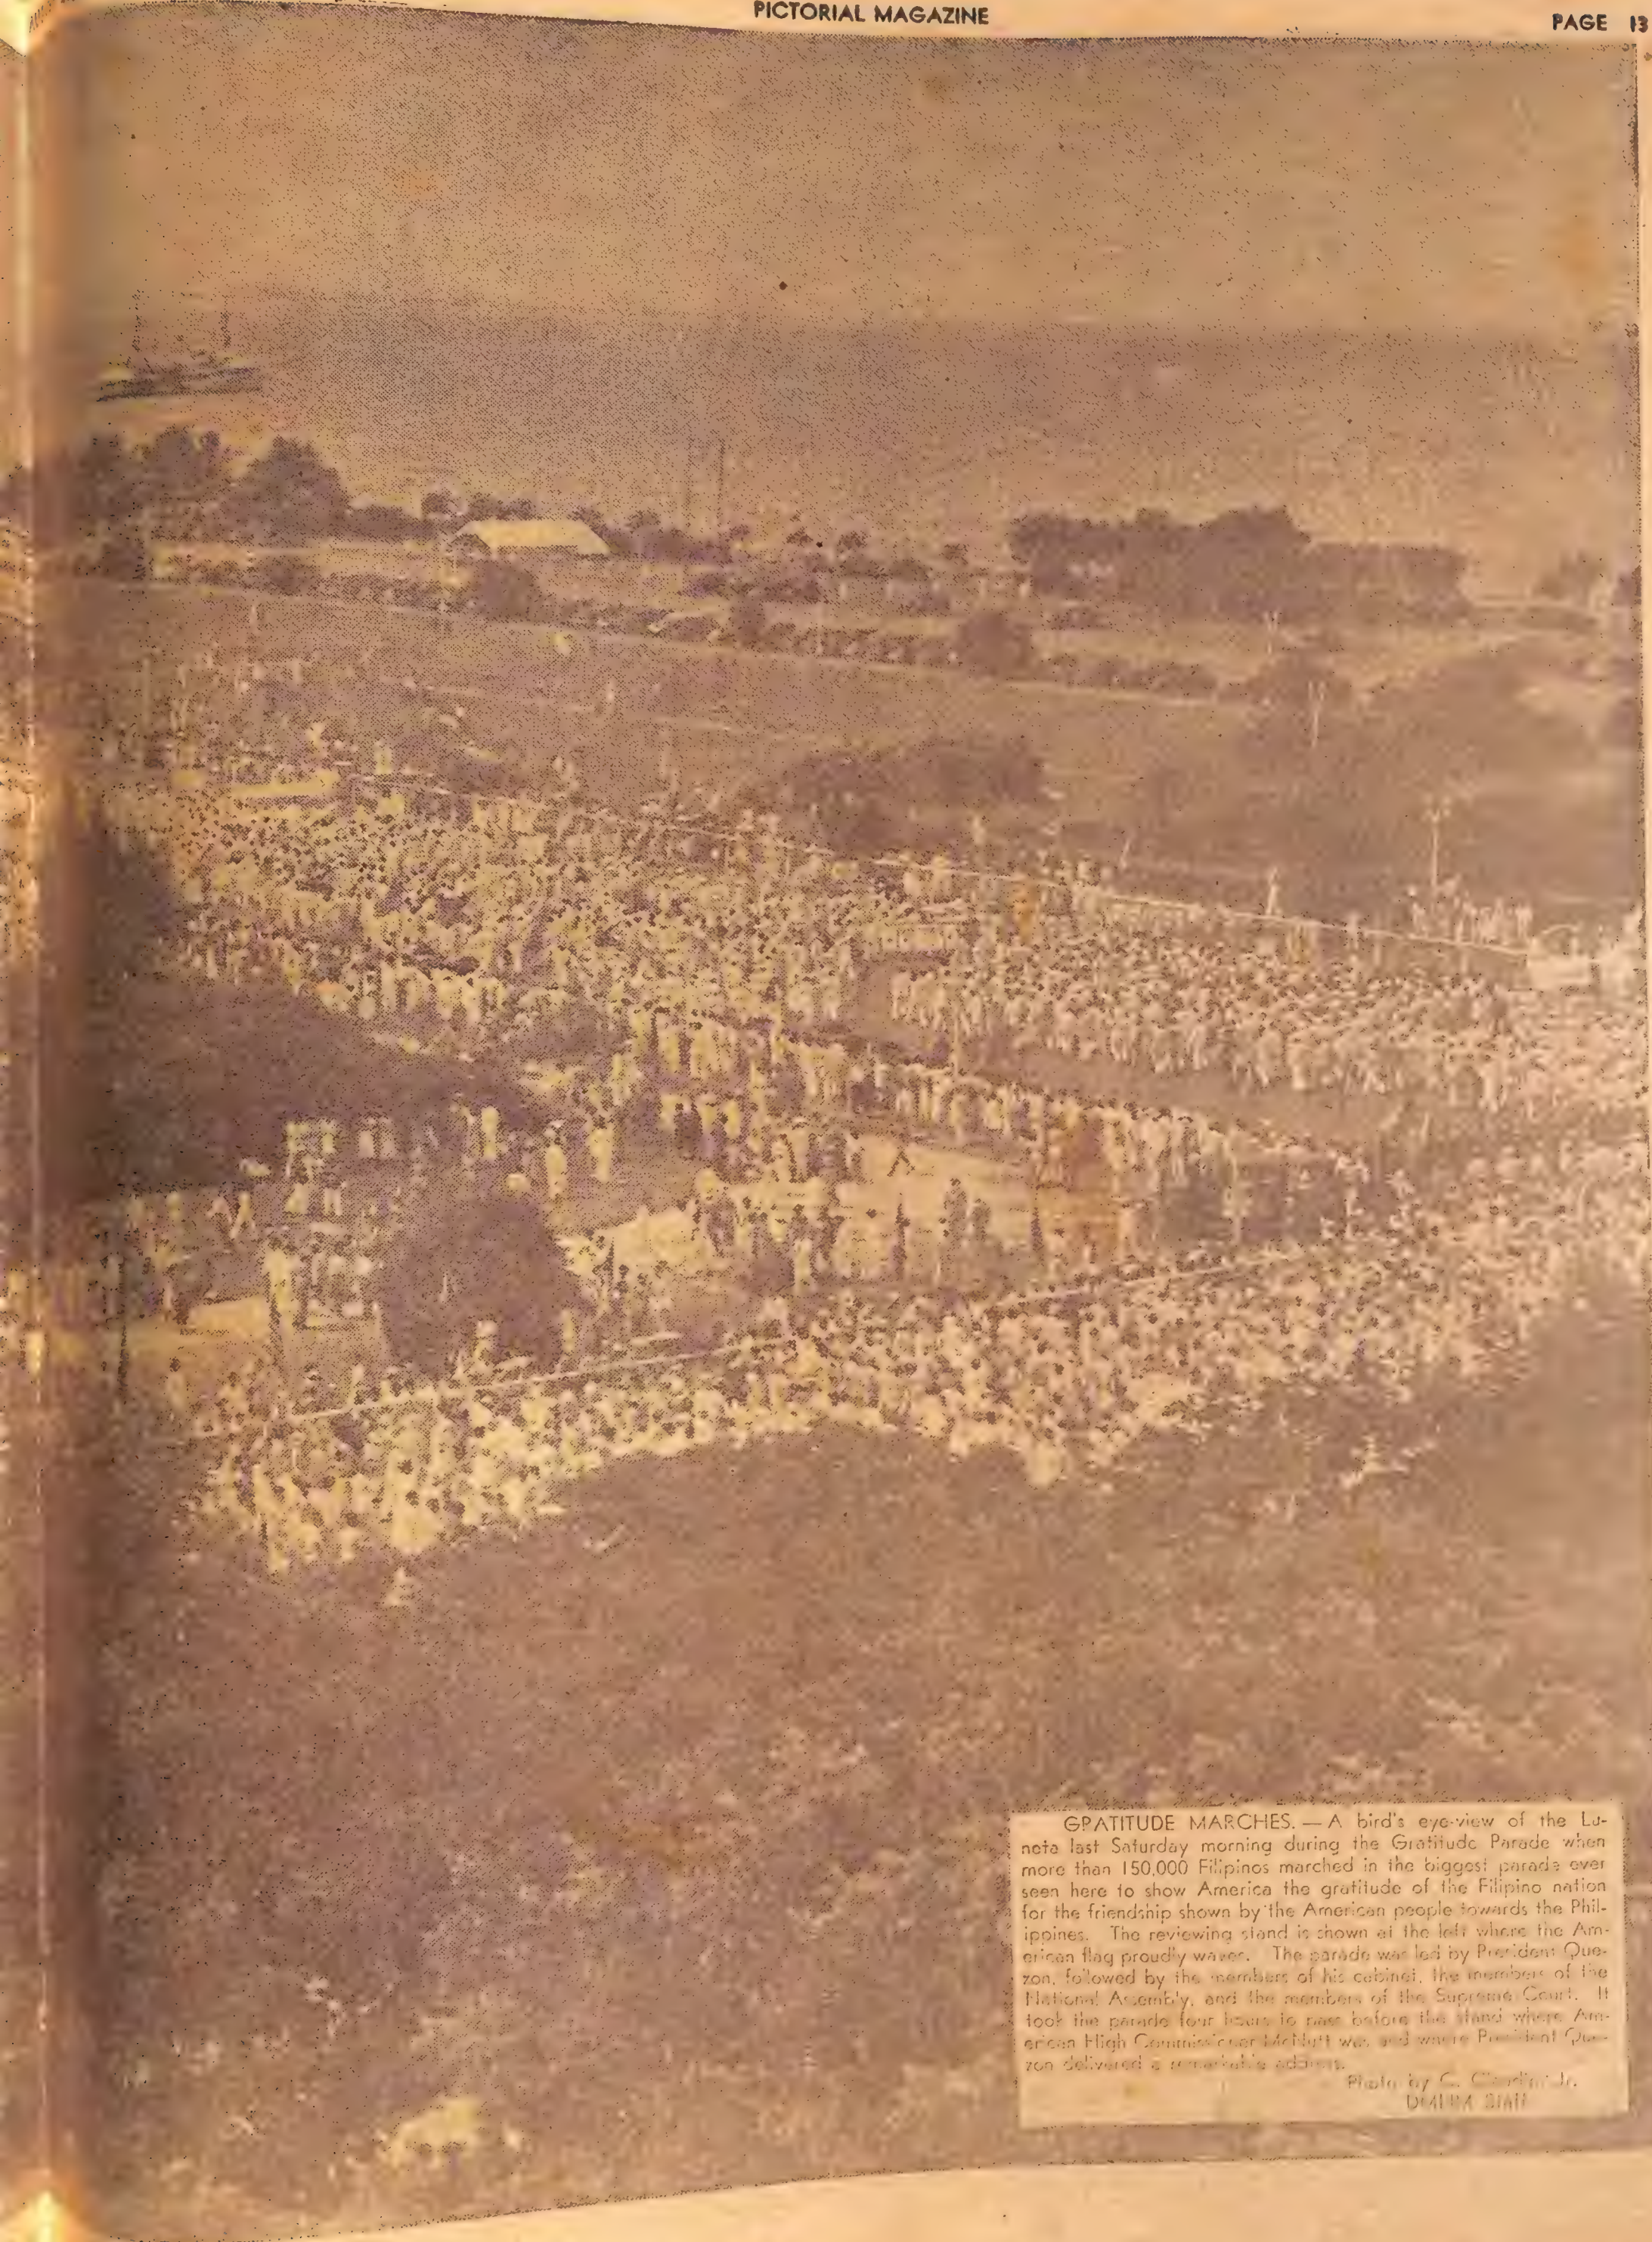

ADAMSON SCHOOL R.O.T.C. cadets, left, participated with their new uniforms. Far Eastern University cadets, right, also did their share in making the day a glorious event. Spic and span in the morning sun, they, together with other military units, presented a marvelous display of precision and discipline.

AS THE PARADE COLORS passed in front of the Manila Hotel, "Manila's own"—21st Infantry of the U. S. Army—closed at attention.

SALUTING THE COLORS: Commissioner McNutt, President Quezon, Vice-President Osmeña, General Paulino Santos, are shown above saluting the colors as they passed in front of the reviewing stand during the mammoth parade. It took at least four hours for the parade to go through, showing the number and the great enthusiasm of the Filipinos in the celebration of America's historical day.

GOVERNMENT GROUPS made up a considerable portion of the crowd in the parade. This one is a unit of the National Information Board, one of the newest entities in the government. Behind it is the group of the Census Commission.

LABOR ORGANIZATIONS were likewise well represented in the celebration. At least 15,000 laborers, representing more than 60 labor unions in Manila and in the provinces, participated. Above is a group of the Elizalde and Company labor union.

FLAG PRESENTATION: The highlight of the Filipinos' celebration of Occupation Day last Saturday was the presentation of the Stars and Stripes to U. S. High Commissioner Paul V. McNutt by President Quezon, above. At the left is a close-up of a portion of the big crowd on the reviewing stand, showing Mrs. Sergio Osmeña, Mrs. Meyers, Admiral Meyers, Gen. John R. Hughes, commanding general of the Philippine Department, U. S. army (in cap), and Miss Osmeña, daughter of the Vice-President.

FIREWORKS: The flower-like, resplendent object in the left panel is a difficult "shot" taken of one of the fireworks held in the evening following the Occupation Day celebration while above is an arch symbolic of the goodwill and cooperation between the United States and the Philippines. A replica of the arch of the Commonwealth can be seen placed under the Bell of Liberty.

WHEN PRESIDENT QUEZON attended mass and had breakfast at the Letran College this morning as part of the celebration of his 60th birthday, he found a pleasant surprise awaiting him. His old desk, which he used when he was a youthful student in the college and recently identified by college authorities by his name carved on it, was brought out and placed on display. The President once more sat on it, as shown in the photo at the left. Left to right in the picture are Rev. One of the most appreciated gifts to President Quezon on his birthday was the oil painting by Fernando Amorsolo presented by Don Adrian Got in the name of the Compañia General de Tabacos de Filipinas, of which he is president.

This life-size portrait of the President was done with the masterful skill that is Amorsolo's. More than a mere work of art, it is the symbol of a momentous period in Philippine history. It preserves for the coming generations the Manuel L. Quezon of this fateful era when a nation is to be born, the first Christian country in the Far East.

This new oil painting of the President takes its place among the distinguished portraits of past Spanish governors-general and American governors of the Philippines in the Malacañan gallery. Herald 8-20-38

UMBRELLAS FOR SCHOOL TEACHERS

Life Begins at 60

This FOTO NEWS picture of Manuel Luis Quezon shows the President of the Philippines as he appeared in the afternoon of August 19, 1938, his sixtieth birthday. The occasion was a birthday address to the Youth of the Philippines delivered at the Rizal Memorial Stadium. The President pleaded for the regeneration of the Filipino, hoped for "a nation that will live forever, sharing the common task of advancing the welfare and promoting the happiness of mankind." Said the Leader: "The Filipino people are on the march, towards their destiny, to conquer their place in the sun."

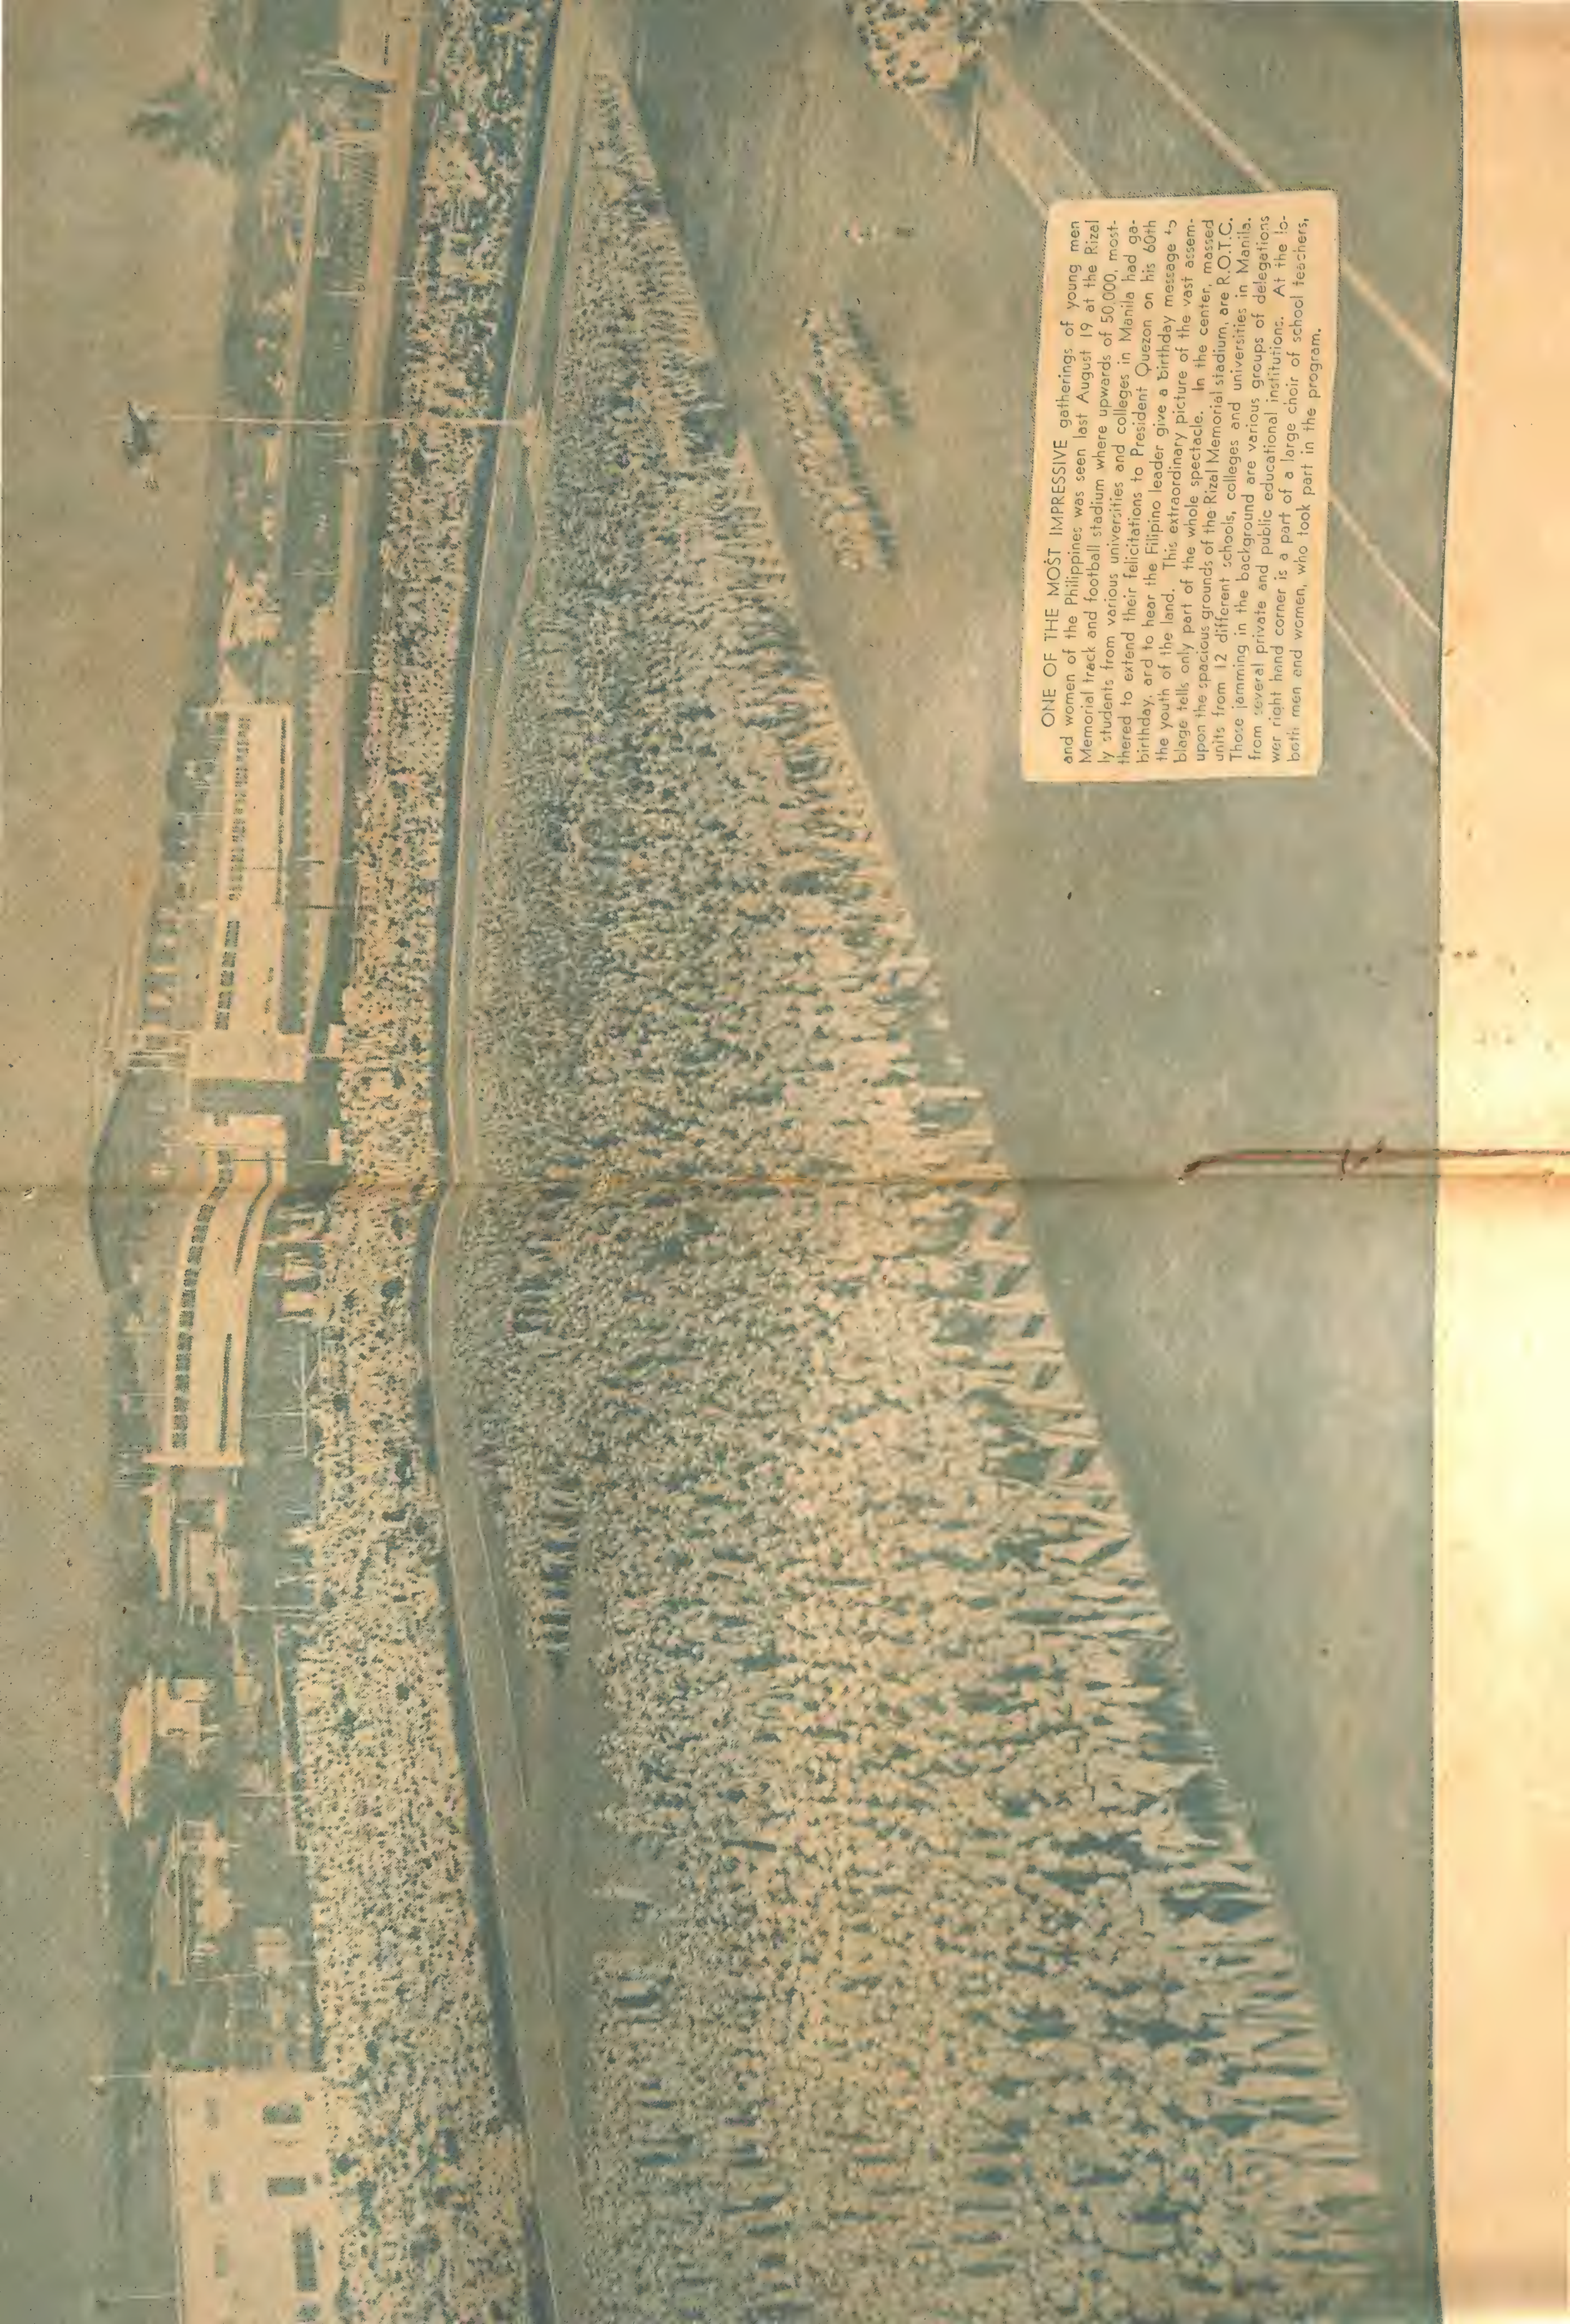

THE SECRETARY OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION, Vice-President Sergio Osmeña, is shown addressing the mammoth assembly of youth that gathered at the Rizal track and football stadium last August 19 to greet the President on his birthday anniversary. Behind can be seen the President, Mrs. Quezon, Secretary Vargas, Mrs. Osmeña, and the President's daughter, Maria Aurora.

A LARGE GROUP of public school teachers joined in the youth rally and contributed a musical number to the occasion. Above, a select choir of male and female tutors sings to the accompaniment of a band of musicians. The teachers wore mestiza dresses.

ONE OF THE MOST IMPRESSIVE gatherings of young men and women of the Philippines was seen last August 19 at the Rizal Memorial track and football stadium where upwards of 50,000, mostly students from various universities and colleges in Manila had gathered to extend their felicitations to President Quezon on his 60th birthday, and to hear the Filipino leader give a birthday message to the youth of the land. This extraordinary picture of the vast assemblage tells only part of the whole spectacle. In the center, massed upon the spacious grounds of the Rizal Memorial stadium, are R.O.T.C. units from 12 different schools, colleges and universities in Manila. Those jamming in the background are various groups of delegations from several private and public educational institutions. At the lower right hand corner is a part of a large choir of school teachers, both men and women, who took part in the program.

The Leader Talks To Youth

President Manuel L. Quezon is shown above in various poses as he spoke to the young people at the Jose Rizal Memorial stadium yesterday afternoon. He appealed to the Filipino youth to conserve the old time virtues of the Filipinos of yesteryear, which traits are now fast disappearing in the face of the incursions of a falsely-interpreted modernism. He exhorted them to make a common effort for the spiritual renaissance of the nation to which he vowed to dedicate his last three years of office.

Surrounding the president are Walter Marshall, Howard Cavender, Secretary Cuenca, L. Weinzheimer and Assemblyman. Lusa.

GOING UP: A few minutes afterwards, the President appeared with disheveled hair (note top pictures) after acknowledging cheers, and wishes for a bon voyage from the throng. The crowd closes in as the President goes up the gangplank.

HAPPY TRIP: Secretary of Finance Antonio de las Alas bids the President good-bye. No serpentine, just a firm handshake. The bulky form at right to the camera is that of Secretary Elpidio Quirino, almost obliterating from the lens.

QUITE SERIOUS: The President and Under Secretary Gabriel Magalong, above, engage in a rather serious talk on the gangplank. At right, the President on the bridge with Howard Cavender and young Cavender, waves adieu to the crowd at Pier 3. On the lower deck is Mr. Juanito Ledesma among the well-known passengers on the ship.

GIVING INSTRUCTIONS: Aboard the ship, the President gives some instruction to Assemblyman Benigno Aquino, campaign manager of the Nationalist Party, while Assemblyman Felipe Buencantino, standing, listens too. Aquino will keep the home-fires burning while the President is away.

A feature of the reception given him on his arrival there this week was the floral canopy carried by girl members of Zamboanga's social set, under which the President walked. The canopy was a new note in reception ceremonies, which the resourceful residents of the southern city claim to have introduced. The President was pleased very much by the hearty and joyous welcome and he beamed all the way despite the very warm morning. He is shown with Assemblyman Juan Alano.

"THE Doña AURORA"

A CLOSE-UP of the attractive clusters of "flowers," which are really leaves of this new plant discovered at Mount Makiling.

VERY ORNAMENTAL for Manila's gardens is the Doña Aurora which grows splendidly and presents a very attractive appearance.

ing care in which the plant was surrounded showed results for soon they could see its splendid green foliage with clusters of white leaf-like structures.

The plant was very similar to its mother species, Mussaenda philippica in every respect. It differs however very markedly in the following features: The genus Mussaenda philippica is characterized by one of its calyx lobes developing and enlarging into a leaf-like structure producing various colors of white, red and orange. The rest of the calyx-lobes, four in number, remain green.

In the Doña Aurora, instead of one calyx-lobe developing into a leaf-like structure, four or five calyx-lobes develop into these leaf-like structures producing attractive clusters of snow-white "flowers," that form a very striking contrast to its very green foliage.

The plant as far as is known is sterile as it has never produced fruits or seeds. So far only five marcots have been obtained from the plant as it is feared that mutilation and excessive marcottings may kill the mother

NAMED after the First Lady of the Land and hailed as a new discovery in the plant kingdom of the Philippines is a very rare and ornamental garden variety that grows to a splendid height and bears, besides its brilliant green foliage, close sprigs of snow-white "flowers," borne in such clusters as to rival in number the very foliage itself.

This truly remarkable-looking plant is found only in the Philippines and was recently discovered at the foot of Mount Makiling at an altitude of about 100 meters. One might almost say that it was a re-discovery because the original collection was made by Professor C. Mabesa way back in 1915 near the place where it was accidentally re-discovered by one of the employees of the Bureau of Forestry.

A specimen from the first original plant had once been shown to former Director Merrill of the Bureau of Science. The plant then was in a dried state and Dr. Merrill, not having seen the plant in its living condition, classified the specimen as Mussaenda philippica, which is a very common species in Mount Makiling.

In 1930, however, during one of Professor Curran's excursions to Mount Makiling, he accidentally saw a beautiful variety of Mussaenda philippica to which he was very much attracted. The newly re-discovered plant was found in practically the same place from which the same specimen sent to Dr. Merrill was taken.

Professor Curran had the plant dug up and transplanted in the School of Forestry Nursery at Los Baños, where it was carefully tended. The unceas-

Quezon, Officials Attend Anderson Rites

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR ANDERSON—Shown above, left, is U. S. High Commissioner McNutt who was among those who attended the funeral services for Hubert "Andy" Anderson, manager of the Manila Hotel, which were held at the Central Student Church.

AFTER THE SERVICES, President Quezon was among those who stood in silence at the entrance as the body is being removed from the church. Pallbearers were H. T. Ewald, S. W. O'Brien, Col. Henry Gilhouser, Tom Hill, L. Hayden and E. J. Baun-

PRESIDENT QUEZON AND GEN. MACARTHUR shown above were among those present at the Anderson rites.

ATTENDED by AHC McNutt and President Quezon, the funeral services for Hubert C. Anderson, 56, manager of the Manila Hotel, were held last Thursday afternoon in the Central Student Church under the auspices of the Corrigidor-Southern Lodge No. 3, Free and Accepted Masons. The most impressive phase of the rites was that performed by nearly 500 Masons present who filed past the casket, each depositing a green twig on it and raising the right hand to "commend the spirit of the deceased to his Creator." Anderson came to the Philippines in 1900 with the United States Army.

Royalty Attends Philippine Barrio Fiesta

Prince Louis Ferdinand of the Hohenzollern dynasty, and grandson of the German Kaiser, and his bride, the Grand Duchess Kyra, daughter of the pretender to the Russian throne, who have been visiting in Manila in the course of their honeymoon trip around the world, got a glimpse of Philippine rural life at the "Barrio Fiesta" given in their honor at Los Tareas Club last Tuesday evening. U.S. High Commissioner McNutt and President Quezon headed the list of the crowd of Manila's cosmopolitan society that attended the "pasalubong" (welcome) fiesta. Appearing in the picture at the right are President Quezon and the Prince chatting. The gentleman behind the President is Antonio Brias. Miss Maria Aurora Quezon is at the extreme right.

Fun was had by all present at the "pasalubong" for the royal couple. Commissioner McNutt and the Princess are here caught by the camera dancing. In the circle, the Princess and Mrs. McNutt chatting.

Two prominent young girls at the ball were Louise McNutt, who wore a mass of flowers in her hair, and Maria Aurora Quezon, in mestiza dress, snapped off-guard. Miss Quezon led rigo-don participants. Tribuna 9-25-38

SMILING IN THE RAIN—In spite of the heavy rain that threatened to spoil the success of last night's brilliant reception and ball at Malacañan in honor of Prince Louis Ferdinand and the Grand Duchess Kira, guests arrived, smiling undauntedly. The Palace gardens were brilliantly illuminated, as in all palace social functions, and the most select group from our Manila Cosmopolitan society was present. Unlike most of the important social affairs given at the Palace, however, this time there was no reception line. Major Nieto personally conducted the guests to the principal salon where they were greeted by the royal guests of honor and their hostess, Mrs. Aurora A. Quezon. His Excellency President Quezon accompanied the Grand Duchess in viewing the palace grounds, while the Prince escorted Mrs. Quezon.

PRESIDENT QUEZON SOUNDED THE WARNING at the inauguration of the tenement houses in Vitas, Tondo, last Monday, that unless "those who work whether with their hands or with their brains" know how to use their own lands and other resources, others will come and get them. "Labor existed before Capital. Capital may be wiped out entirely, but as long as there is an arm that can do work, that arm will produce new capital, a product of labor," the President said by way of dignifying labor. He announced that the remaining three years of his administration will be dedicated to the amelioration of the living conditions of the masses. STILL MARCHING FORWARD!—¡TODAVIA MARCHA ADELANTE!

PRESIDENT QUEZON

Manila, November 12, 1938.

The Volcanic Quezon

To the right is a mask, with a surrealist touch, of President Manuel L. Quezon, who marks the half-way point of his presidential term next Tuesday. During the three years that he has been President of the Commonwealth, his likeness, his words and his actions have taken up more space in the Philippine press than those of any other individual. And with good reason. For the President's actions are even more dramatic than those of perfect-coned Mayon.

If you stop to think of it, the human volcano at Malacañang has much in common with its natural counterpart on the Bicol peninsula. Both are in a constant state of minor eruption, moved by cosmic forces over which they have no control. Major eruptions on the part of either generally result in widespread havoc, but once the fire has gone out of their lava the countryside is richer for the explosion. The most pervading similarity of all is that the man and the mountain both dominate the landscapes in which they have been placed. The Philippine Commonwealth without President Quezon would be like the Bicol region without Mayon. The loss of either would mark a void which probably never could be filled.

(Photographic Reproduction by Sun Studio)

The Beatific Osmeña

On the left is another mask, even more markedly surrealist than that above, of Vice-President Sergio Osmeña. The faint halo around his head is more real than fancied. In the calm presence of the Vice-President one feels something of the atmosphere of a highly-vaulted cathedral. Nor does Mr. Osmeña's record belie this impression. Always he has lived his life above the level of ordinary politics, keeping his public and private actions beyond reproach.

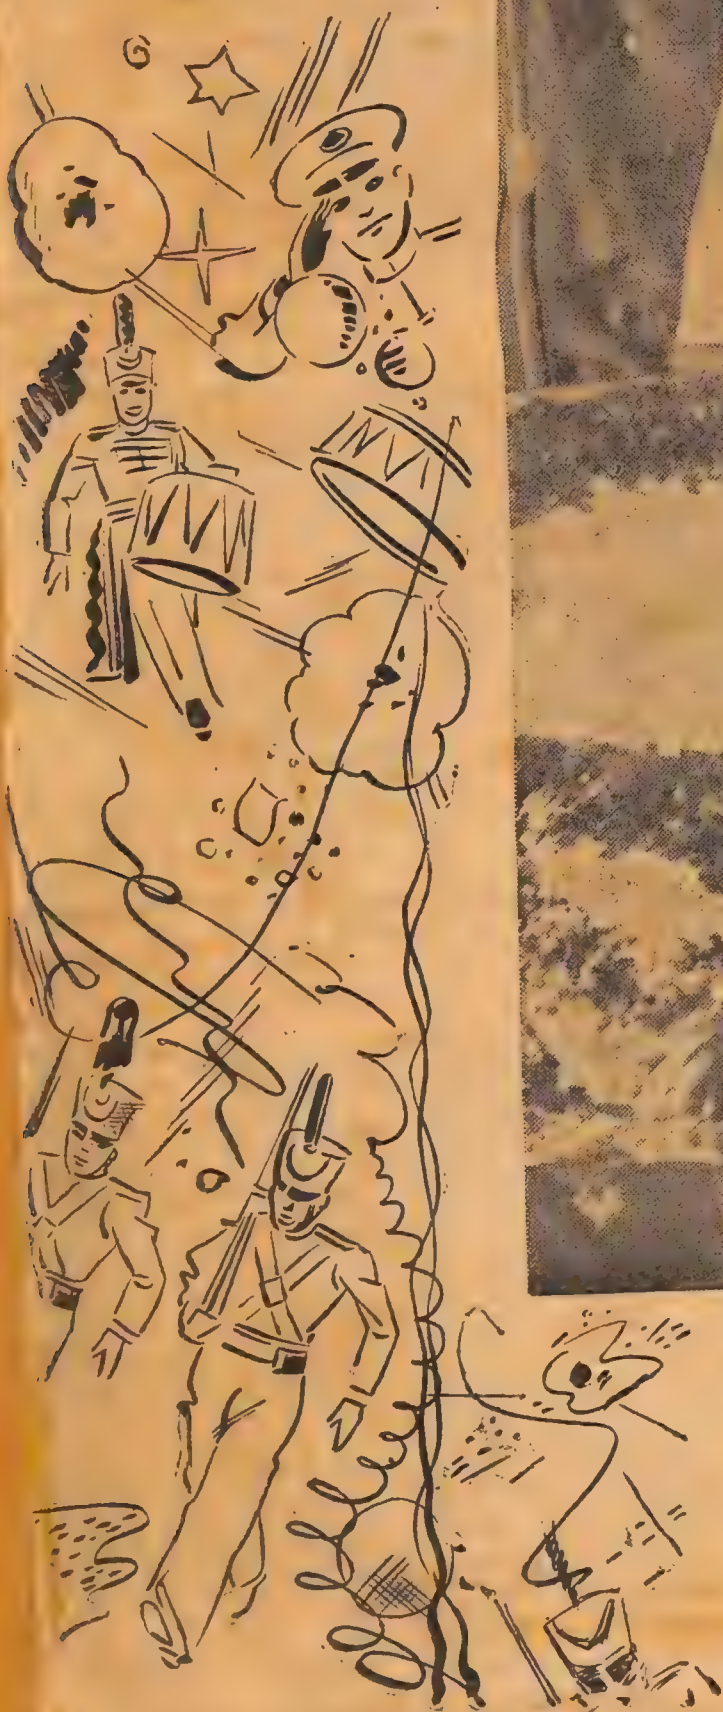

The zipper on Mr. Osmeña's mouth has been placed there by Mr. Osmeña himself. No reporter could ever get the Vice-President to say something which he did not plan to say at the start of the interview—a task fairly easy to accomplish with President Quezon. Mr. Osmeña can say plenty when he desires to do so; but he has long known the value of enhancing his beatific smile with an enigmatic silence. He knows that in the final analysis his public record will be summed up by his deeds, not his words. That is why he can afford to be chary with his words.

These masks were prepared, with malice toward none, by Esmeraldo Izon, head of the FREE PRESS art staff. They were displayed a fortnight ago at the Beaux Arts ball in Manila, where they attracted so much attention that it was decided to reproduce them here.

THE THIRD ANNIVERSARY OF THE COMMONWEALTH WAS OBSERVED THROUGHOUT the Philippines with appropriate programs in all the towns last Tuesday. As in previous years, Manila was the center of the festival. United States High Commissioner Paul Vories McNutt and Mrs. Aurora A. Quezon, the first lady of the land, were the central figures in the celebration held at the Luneta last Tuesday morning. Picture shows the High Commissioner reviewing the parade. Others in the photograph are Mrs. Quezon, Major-General John Hughes, commanding general of the Philippine Department, USA, Mrs. Sergio Osmeña, Mrs. Manuel A. Roxas, Miss Zenaida Quezon.

CLIMAX OF COMMONWEALTH ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION—Climaxing this morning's third Commonwealth anniversary celebration was a military parade which U. S. HISTORICAL FLOATS IN ANNIVERSARY PARADE

Impressive historical floats describing various episodes in Philippine history took part in last week's parade celebrating the third anniversary of the Commonwealth of the Philippines. The ideas for the floats were supplied by the Philippine Exposition staff, the expenses were born by cities and provinces, and the people taking part were furnished by Manila universities. Shown and numbered on this page are:

1. "Dewey and Taft," sponsored by Negros Oriental, posed by Adamson School of Industrial Chemistry;
2. "Del Pilar, Lopez Jaena and La Solidaridad," sponsored by the City of Iloilo, posed by University of Manila;
3. "Dagohoy Rebellion in Bohol," sponsored by Bohol, posed by the Mapua Institute of Technology;
4. "Bonifacio and the Katipunan," sponsored by Pampanga, posed by the National Teachers College;
5. "The Glorification of Rizal," sponsored by Laguna, posed by the University of Santo Tomas.
